Free Willy

The Amazing Story Of What Really Happened To The Whale The Movie Was Based On

By Dan Rattiner

Remember the movie Free Willy? If you do then you recall that this little boy befriends this killer whale and after a ninety minute battle with some rather seedy types who want to put Willy in a circus display, arranges for Willy to be returned to the wild. There is an emotional scene at the end where the young boy and the killer whale come pretty close to tears, as does everyone else in the movie theater.

After this movie came out, you may remember, the whale who played Willy was found to be living in exactly the sort of amusement park captivity as was the Willy in the movie. He had been named Keiko at birth and had been stuck in this captivity situation for all of the fourteen years he had been alive in this amusement park in Mexico. A great uproar ensued and the story went out over the news that the real Willy, rescued from Mexico by scientists and environmentalists from America, was being set free in an exact duplication of what had happened in the movie.

Well, I'm here to tell you that it never happened. What has happened in the last six years is almost stranger than the Free Willy movie.

Here's the true story.

In 1994, the year of all the commotion about how Willy was suffering in the Mexican amusement park, a very wealthy man stepped forward to throw money at the situation to make things right. He was and is Craig McCaw, the founder and chairman of MCI Worldcom. MCI, which, as you probably know, a few months ago gobbled up Sprint. McCaw's personal fortune runs into the billions. He would see to Willy's release and he would see that it was done right.

Various attempts were made during this period to get Willy to figure out what to do with the fish, small fish that other orcas would normally eat.

The first thing he did after purchasing Willy from the Mexican amusement park, was to have him shipped up to the Oregon Coast Aquarium in Newport, Oregon, where scientists and technicians could observe him and see to his every need while preparing for his release into the wild. Willy loved to play with the scientists and the nutritionists and the veterinarians and the physicians who visited him. Having been in captivity for fifteen years, that was all he knew. For food you rang a bell or honked a horn. People came with little fish and if you did what they told you to do, you ate. As for other killer whales – orcas they are called – Willy hadn't a clue. He was the only one in the Mexican amusement park. It seems reasonable to assume that from Willy's perspective he was one of a kind.

McCaw of course, had put the whole project in the hands of professionals. He created a Free Willy Keiko Foundation and after a year merged it with the non-profit Jon Cousteau Institute which was being run by the son of the late ocean explorer Jacques Cousteau. The combined organization was renamed Ocean Future Society and the cost to take care of Willy that first year was about $800,000.

The months went by and the years went by and at the end of fiscal 1998, the total cost of taking care of Willy up in Oregon was about $5.5 million. Not a whole lot of progress was made during the time Willy was up in the aquarium. He had been brought there by the way, after the Free Willy Keiko Foundation had obtained a public display permit made necessary by the Marine Mammal Protection Act, a law that was passed after the uproar created by the movie Free Willy.

It must have been something that rankled them, since it was the intention of the foundation that

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Here's the latest Sean Puffy Combs news. Somebody stole his seat in the audience at the Grammy's and had to be evicted. He's been indicted on bribery charges relating to the shootout at the Club New York in Times Square. During fashion week he brought out a new line of clothing called "Sean John." You could write a whole newspaper about this East Hampton resident.

Hamptonite John Irving, labored long and hard to write Cider House Rules. One wonders if he ever thought while writing it that the motion picture made from it would be nominated for seven academy awards.

Sag Harbor's E.L. Doctorow has come out with his new book, City of God. Time Magazine spent a whole page praising it.

Another writer in the Hamptons, Wendy Wasserstein, became a single mother last October when she gave birth to daughter Lucy Jane. She says, mysteriously, " a male friend agreed to help her with the project."

Many Hamptonites attended the Grammy party for Clive Davis, the Arista Records chief last Tuesday night. Among those attending were, Jennifer Lopez, Lenny Kravitz, Russell Simmons, Britany Spears, Penny Marshall and Billy Joel.

East Hampton's Steven Spielberg received a Vanguard Award from the NAACP last week for promoting social justice in his films: Empire of the Sun, The Color Purple and Shindler's List. He attended the dinner with his wife Kate Capshaw.

Two men who enjoy each other's company immensely are celebrity divorce lawyer Raoul Felder and Broadway comedian Jackie Mason. The two have written a popular cookbook together and now share an opinion column in the Washington Times. Recently hooting at the Baseball Commissioner for suggesting that psychiatrists see Atlanta baseball player John is off his rocker Rocker.

The one woman Off-Broadway show The Heat Is On features chanteuse Quinn Lemley, tracing the biography of Rita Hayworth. Hayworth's daughter, Princess Aga Kahn of Southampton was the founder of the Rita Hayworth Foundation that raises money for Alzheimer's research, a major black tie event in Manhattan every year.

Columnist Cindy Adams of the New York Post is looking to sell her Park Avenue Penthouse apartment, which she finds lonely since the passing of her much loved husband Joey, in December. She still has a house in Bridgehampton.

So, who ya gonna call?

You love the sunshine and the sunshine loves you. But like any love, this can get out of hand. Too much sun can harm your skin. You already know that. But did you know that every time sunshine makes you squint, it's because your eyes are receiving ten times too much light and are being hurt?

Michael Moody, who owns The Awning Company, knows all these scientific things. He is the East End's only awning professional certified by the Industrial Fabrics Association International. When he worked for PAN AM at JFK, London, & Frankfurt, he was an FAA licensed mechanic and certified aircraft machinist and has earned advanced degrees from Purdue and New York universities. His technological mastery is also why you want him installing your new motorized Durasol® awning. Next to a 747, your new motorized awnings are a piece of cake.

All You Had To Do Was Answer Five Questions About Dan's Papers 40th Anniversary

By Dan Rattiner

When the clocked ticked to one minute past midnight on January 1, 2000, Dan's Papers not only began its fortieth anniversary, but also along with a few other publications on the eastern end of Long Island, could say that it spanned the millenniums. Thus, impressed with ourselves, Dan's decided to run a contest, the winner to receive two tickets to a Broadway Show in New York. There were five questions:

1. Guess how many articles that I have written during the first forty years.
2. Guess how many articles I will write during the next forty years.
3. Describe your favorite articles that I will write in the next forty years.
4. Truthfully answer whether you have read every article that has ever appeared in Dan's Papers during the last forty years.
5. Describe the most important event during the last forty years.

Diane Roncone of Hampton Bays, said that the most important event during the last forty years would be a tie between the first landing on the moon and Linda Tripp's face job. She also predicted that in the next forty years, I will begin writing stories, but, after one hundred, host the biggest talk show ever, called, Dan's Papers Live. Regulars on the show will be Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee, who will be married to each other and thanks to technology have sixty children. "Kathie Lee would have started an educational program featuring the how to's of clothing manufacturing. According to Kathie Lee, "It will help teach my children the value of hard work, while expecting nothing in turn."

Diane Roncone... said that the most important event during the last forty years would be a tie between the first landing on the moon and Linda Tripp's face job.

Bill Sokolin, of Southampton, said that I have written 4,120 articles since the paper started. He's read practically all of them, and that many of them are Pultizer Prize pieces. Having thus flattered this editor, he goes on to say that his favorite article was being named Wine Merchant of the Year, since he moved out here from New York. I can't blame him for that.

Claude Tortorelli, of East Hampton, did some math and concluded that I had written 3,499 articles during the last forty years. During the next forty he claims I will write 3,500 just to prove that I can progress.

Marlene Clifford of Hampton Bays, claimed that the most important event during the last forty years has not been the founding of Dan's Papers, but Jerry Seinfeld going off the air, leaving her only to watch Homer Simpson as her comedy moment. She also predicted inaccurately, as at least this article proves, that I will write zero articles in the next forty years. "You will hire a look alike." She wrote. "which is relatively easy to find since the men with white suits and beards are lined up after Christmas is over. You only need to fill in for an occasional summer job at local benefits and art functions."

David Reed Kennedy of East Hampton, said that his favorite article that I had written in the last forty years was about sitting in on a book reading in East Hampton with truck stop girl, or "Biker Babe." As for future articles, he wants me to do

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Cuba

A Golf Game, A Native Indian Named Hatuey And A Leader Of The Cuban Revolution

By Dan Rattiner

During the wintertime when things slow down in the Hamptons, a lot of local people pack up and head for points unknown, either to lie on the beach or backpack into some adventure. My adventure this winter was Cuba, which has been in the news, both internationally and locally. Internationally there is the young boy Elian, age six, who survived on an inner tube, after the crowded boat that he and his mother were on, sank between Havana and Miami, drowning most of the occupants. Elian survived and was taken to the Cuban community in Miami where a great struggle about whether he ought to be returned to Cuba, began.

Locally, there was Peter Honerkamp, the owner of the Stephen Talkhouse in Amagansett, who put together a softball team, and, flying to Cuba via Vera Cruz stayed a week in a Havana hotel playing pick-up softball against a variety of Cuban teams. They won one and lost four before flying home.

Others who have gone on adventures to Cuba include Frank Newbold, the East Hampton realtor, and Fraser and Frances Ann Dougherty of East Hampton – Fraser runs LTV – and the late Elaine Benson, the art dealer in Bridgehampton. You can go legally, a process which is long and difficult, since normal relations don't exist between the United States and Cuba, or you can go illegally, as in, just get up and go there. The Doughertys' were living on a sailboat in Key West when Fraser picked up a brochure for a Hemingway Marina in the Miramar Beach section of Havana. Without either a passport or a Visa, the couple just picked up and sailed the ninety miles across the Florida Straight and spent two wonderful days and nights at the marina, largely unnoticed, except by some delighted local people. Elaine Benson, on the other hand, went to Cuba as part of a delegation interested in Cuban art. She did the following summer subsequently have a two-week showing of some of the wonderful Cuban painters she discovered on her trip.

I won't bother you with the details of how I arranged to get to Cuba. What I did want to talk about was a photograph I saw in an old magazine in Havana, which showed three men on golf a course in the suburbs of Havana. The picture was taken in 1961, two years after the fall of the dictator Batista, and the golf course was owned by IBM. The three men who are playing together are all wearing rumpled rebel uniforms and are on the third tee. Fidel Castro, bearded, thirty-one years old, is filling out the score card, Che Guevara wearing his famous beret with a star on it in the front, leans on a two wood and looks down the fairway, he's about twenty-five years old, and hitting is Antonio Nunez Jimenez, historian, author and Cuban patriot who fought alongside Castro when he came down from the mountains to take Havana. Jimenez is forty-two, also bearded like Castro and holding a driver out in front of him, is fully concentrating his attention on hitting the ball down the fairway.

Fidel putts on the sixth green during that famous game of golf in Havana in 1961

I saw this famous photograph on page forty-two of a magazine published at the time, in Spanish, in a glass case at the home of Antonio Nunez, which since his passing last year at the age of seventy-eight, has been turned into a museum. It's the most extraordinary museum I have ever seen, but back to the photograph.

The three freedom fighters were playing at the invitation of IBM executives at the time. For a while there it looked like the Cubans and the Americans might get along and in the glass case along with the magazine photo is the actual score card that they used. They played eighteen holes and they were terrible, they had never played golf before after all, and they didn't know about Mulligans or the phrase "Oh we won't count that one," and so they were getting fourteens on par fours and sevens on par threes. Nunez wound up with 158, Fidel 138, and Che Guevara, the winner, 122.

They played eighteen holes and they were terrible, they had never played golf after all, and they didn't know about Mulligans...

Nunez in his life collected all kinds of books and papers and souvenirs he found interesting. For instance, he saved all the medals he was ever awarded, there must be 400 in several glass cases, including several from the Soviet Union in the 1970's and 1980's. He also saved those little nametags that you get when you go to a convention. There was one glass case filled with them from conferences in Equador, Peru, Costa Rica and so forth.

The glass case with the golf photograph contained most everything relating to Che Guevara. Among them was a leaflet with a photograph of a young Che Guevara at nineteen, and a still younger Che under the headline Villaclavaniez! It was signed the Villaclava Civic Association and in addition to the attention getting word, (as in residents in Villaclava) it read, "Capture these men, they wish to take our youth to their death and destroy our riches. We are Cubans, not Russians."

The front room of the museum is the former reception room at the Nunez home, and has the walls lined with Nunez's personal library of books, mostly about Jose Marti, the Cuban National. Marti was involved in the liberation of the country from Spain in 1898. There are also forty-two published books Nunez along one wall, geographies, archeologies, histories, children's books and many books about Fidel Castro and the rest of the revolution.

In another room, a high ceiling studio, Nunez's papers and photographs are cataloged. They include notes and papers for dozens of other books for adults and at least fifty other children's books, which the curators of the museum say is something that will be left for future scholars to publish.

Without a doubt however, the most extraordinary thing about the Nunez Museum is a twenty-five foot long mahogany canoe. In the late 1980's at the age seventy, Nunez led a twelve man expedition of exploration down the Amazon from Equador through Peru, Brazil and out into the Caribbean Sea at Venezuela. The expedition, accompanied at this point by a supply ship, then went up the Caribbean chain of islands past Trinidad, Puerto Rico and the Bahamas and then finally came back down to end the journey at Havana. It took a little over a year.

The canoe we were looking at in the museum was one of the two canoes that went on this trip. It was of native design and bore the Native Indian an interview with Marisa Tomei "because I adore her." He also writes in a P.S., If I happen to do an interview with Miss Tomei and it's out here, "I would be happy to take Miss Tomei and whoever interviews' her to dinner."

Sally Ball from Southold entered the contest saying that I hadn't written any articles in the last forty years. However, I had written "Tons of Satire" and according the thesaurus, satires are stories, untruths, whoppers, fables, little fibs, Tara diddles if you're from Britain and jhuths if you're Hindu." She also claims that the most important events that happened in the last forty years, were her six wonderful kids, Ronnie, Donnie, Jonnie, Bonnie, Connie and Honey Bee Ball.

It was hard to decide on the winner of this contest, but in the end I liked best the entry from Valerie Silver Ellis of West Hampton. She claimed that I had written 8,320 articles in the last forty years but would only write 8,315 in the next forty years, because "everybody slows down a little after a while." She said her favorite future article would be the one I intend to write on the Black Irish bringing new life on the East Ends St. Patrick's Day Parades, previously controlled by sleepwalking, rhythmless whites. And she said, her favorite story was the Pool Sharing Program, where people without pools are assigned by zip code to use weekenders homeowners pools mid-week—learning of this by phone from my mom, while away," she wrote, "I frantically called Dan's Papers on Monday, mostly their getting calls from people without pools."

We are delivering four, not two tickets to a Broadway show to Valerie Silver Ellis and it comes with our congratulations. •

he be removed from public display.

The original plan of course, was to teach Willy how to catch food on his own, become independent of human beings and make friends with other killer whales in the wild who travel together in great herds led by several mature males together with females, adolescents and babies.

First, however, they wanted Willy to get used to his environment in Oregon and for that they let things drift for several years while they put together a plan. Various attempts were made during this period to get Willy to figure out what to do with the small fish that other orcas would normally eat that had been released into his tank. Willy befriended these little fish. There were panel discussions and research papers printed on what kind of herd they should look for to release Willy into. The conclusion was that it should be one with a great many females and babies, some teenagers and perhaps just one elderly male. Search parties of scientists were sent out to look for such a herd.

Then in the summer of 1998, something happened in Florida that changed everything. A group of marine biologists, one of whom had trained the TV star, Flipper, were egged on by environmentalists until they agreed to approach the Navy about releasing some of the dolphins that the Navy uses in their underwater commando programs. There had been cutbacks in the military since the end of the Cold War, and there seemed to be more dolphins than the Navy needed. The Navy, anxious to help, volunteered two dolphins to the biologists, who worked with them and then released them into a wild herd off Miami. Three weeks later, both of these dolphins turned up in Palm Beach, chirping and cooing at the swimmers in the ocean there, begging for food. The Navy was called back in and the dolphins, recognizing their former handlers, happily allowed themselves to be hoisted aboard ships with cranes and belly belts. It was found that they were near starvation, though the Navy soon nursed them back to health.

Up in Oregon meanwhile, the Marine Mammal Protection Act approached officials from Ocean Futures and told them that a report would have to be filed with them for their review before Willy could be released. They would vote on it. The Marine Mammal Commission would make the final decision. The reaction of the Ocean Future Society was to remove Willy to a cove in Klettsvik Bay off Heimaey Island, off the South coast of Iceland. They were not beyond the reach of the Marine Mammal Commission – they would lose their licenses if they did not follow the law. But given what had happened in Florida, they thought they would have a better chance of getting Willy back

OIL'S SLIPPERY PATH

The NY State Investigation Of Price Gouging: Tosco, OPEC And Others

By Jerry Cimisi

Earlier this month, the New York State Deputy Attorney General for Public Advocacy, Dietrich Snell spoke before the State Assembly Standing Committee on Consumer Affairs and Protection. The subject was a possible price gouging investigation in regards to home heating oil. It was February 2 and the typical price of a gallon of oil on the East End of Long Island was in the $2.40-2.45 range. It had begun the winter a dollar or more lower.

Snell said, "If we do find evidence of such collusion, that is, evidence that otherwise independent firms have jointly agreed on prices or price levels, we certainly will act quickly and forcefully. I must point out, as well, however, that collusion is often difficult to detect and that antitrust prosecution, while a critical part of our enforcement efforts, will not likely produce a rapid change in the price of home heating oil or diesel fuel."

He added, "The attorney general must first find evidence that the price increase experienced by the consumer is not simply a reflection of an increase incurred with the chain of distribution. It was for this reason that, in December 1990, this office – following the issuance of subpoenas aimed at investigating allegation of price gouging in the retail gasoline and heating oil markets following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, issued a formal report concluding that no violation had occurred."

Snell went on to say that it would not be unlikely that a mesh of factors produced the heating oil increase. He said that in combination with an OPEC cutback of production and the anticipation by U.S. refineries that this winter would be as mild as the last three, America's refineries were at a level of eighty percent capacity as opposed to a normal ninety percent capacity.

Also, American refiners and wholesalers were "diverting considerable diesel fuel (which is essentially the same as heating oil) to Europe from the east and Gulf Coasts. This resulted in a buildup of stocks in Europe at a time when the European Union was expecting imminent and stricter limitations on the sulfur content in diesel fuels. The logic for the European Union was that it could use oil it had already purchased, oil that would not meet the new standards. Thus, if a good deal of supply was on hand, all the better.

Snell further added, "Finally, we are told, major refiners scheduled a larger than usual shutdown of facilities for repair and maintenance."

To top it off, "Even before the brutal cold weather of mid-January, demand for crude oil was at approximately 19.8 barrels per day, the highest December average since 1978."

There was increased demand on the market by the interruptible customers of Brooklyn Union, switching to oil because of the colder temperatures. These customers get a cheaper price on gas by agreeing to switch to oil when the temperature – or wind chill factors – drop below fifteen degrees. According to Snell, this increased demand on the northeast marketplace by 3.5 million gallons a day.

By January 21, wholesale prices had reached record levels. On the New York Mercantile Exchange the wholesale price was $1.25 a gallon, which was an increase of fifty cents in just ten days. "Four times higher than a year ago," said Snell.

He requested that any companies or individual consumers who believe that had information relating to price gouging contact the New York State Attorney General's office.

Tosco's Terminal in Northville

Each of us knows the company that brings our fuel, but where do those companies get their fuel?

A major supplier for Long Island's independent heating oil companies is the Tosco Corporation, that is headquatered in Stamford, Connecticut. The headquarters of its refinery is in Linden, New Jersey. It has seven refineries and 1,300 miles of pipeline. Tosco in fact is one of the largest

A COURT DECISION THAT SENDS A VERY BAD MESSAGE

By Dan Rattiner

People have been talking about the Diallo murder acquittal all week. But the part I cannot get out of my mind is that these four police officers were in an unmarked car and in street clothes. There wasn't a uniform or badge in sight.

So here we have a man who does not speak English that well, sitting outside on his front stoop one evening, doing nothing, when a car pulls up and four big men with guns, clearly agitated and looking right at him, get out. He stands up and retreats to the front door. Where are his keys? He'll go inside as soon as he can find them. They shout at him. Maybe they want his wallet. He reaches into his pocket and holds it out to them.

They fire forty-one times, hitting him nineteen. He dies.

Now let's just assume this is one big misunderstanding. He shouldn't have acted oddly like that, getting up and moving to the door. This is a dangerous neighborhood.

Perhaps he was going to hide some drugs. Perhaps what he was reaching for was a gun. Let's just assume, and I have no doubt of this, that the four policemen are all admirable men, not a trace of prejudice in them, never before been in a firefight, got scared when they saw this man behaving this way, and feel absolutely terrible for how this turned out.

Are they murderers? No. Did they do anything wrong? They sure did.

People – especially women – have often chafed at the law that says you cannot arrest a man unless he does something wrong. He can threaten you, he can intimidate you, he can let the air out of your tires. But until he actually commits a crime, you have to let him walk around free like everybody else. And then of course every once in awhile we read about one of these people actually committing a horrible crime and running off to never be heard from again. Couldn't we have heeded all the warnings? Wouldn't that have stopped it?

Well, in countries run by dictators, yes. In countries where we have democracies, no. You can't just lock somebody up because somebody else says so.

The flip side of this is that everyone has the right to exhibit a wide range of behavior and as long as it is all legal, be free to do it, no matter how uncomfortable it might make others feel. Diallo made these policemen feel uncomfortable. In the dark, they mistook a wallet for a gun.

They shot him dead.

Ultimately, I suppose, we have to put the blame directly on the police department itself and the way they train their officers. There were all sorts of training errors, obviously.

They are terrible shots. If police officers on a firing range could only hit a target – well not a target – but a full scale silhouette of an entire person nineteen times out of forty-one tries, they'd have a flunking grade and would never get a badge.

They did not shout anything they wanted this man to hear in any language that he could understand it in. Yet they knew they were in an area where Spanish was predominantly spoken.

The first rule if you see someone with what you think is a gun is to duck behind something bullets cannot penetrate.

They had their car.

They made no allowances for the fact that a name on the side Hatuey. Nunez and the others wanted to prove that a trip through the jungle on a native ship could still be done today as it had been done in the past by the tribal people.

The canoe now sits in a room that had obviously been built to house it, surrounded by tables that bear native instruments, artifacts and sculptures. There is a vast collection of sculptures of men and women in various sexual positions, and on the wall photographs taken of the expedition in progress.

The photographer, Angel Grana, who was on the expedition, was right there in the room with the canoe when we visited. The trip was only twelve years ago after all, and Grana is now a man in his mid-forties. He told us about some of the things that happened.

"The canoe is named," he said, "after the leader of the native tribe that tried to fight the Spaniards in the sixteenth century. Of course the spears were no match for the Spaniards' guns and Hatuey was captured and sentenced to be burned at the stake. In his cell, he was visited by a Spanish priest who had learned to speak the native language. The priest asked Hatuey if he wanted to go to heaven. Hatuey, puzzled, asked if the Spaniards went to heaven.

"Yes." The priest said.

"In that case," Hatuey said, "I think I'd rather not."

Grana described how when the wind was right they would raise small sails to aid in their paddling. When they emerged into the Caribbean Sea in Venezuela having traversed the Napo River, the Amazon, the Negro, the Oranaco and the Rio, the supply ship would lash the canoes to the sides during the night. This part of the trip was part of a triumphal finale to the expedition. They had been ten months in the jungle and they were visiting the various ports on the various islands along the way.

"When we got to Puerto Rico," Grana said, "the word came out to the supply ship that everyone would be welcome to land there except for the two Cubans on board.

"The United States and Cuba were officially estranged. Well, the crew took a vote and decided we would pass up Puerto Rico; it was all of us or none of us. That night there was a tremendous storm, the ropes holding the Hatuey broke and the canoe sailed off on its own over the horizon. Twenty-two days later, it sailed ashore at the American Naval Base at Vieques, Puerto Rico at a place called Devil's Point. We decided that this was Hatuey visiting the devil since he wouldn't agree to go to heaven. Years later, the American Navy turned the canoe over to the Puerto Ricans and it was privately arranged to be given to us and we have it here on display."

My sense of things here in Cuba, is that the Cubans will endure just about anything to celebrate this wonderful man who gave them their revolution, Fidel. The American embargo which has been in place now for thirty-eight years, has left most of Havana a shambles of peeling paint and broken windows and has made even the simplest things, deodorant, hair conditioners, crayons, almost impossible to get.

But the people seemed to wear these hardships as a badge of honor, much as the British took the bombing of London during World War II. Many things are reused as something else. I've seen deodorant caps used as game board players; aluminum soda cans made into coffee makers. If they can't find one thing to fix something, they'll find something else. That they've been able to keep American automobiles from the 1950's on the road– the embargo started at the end of the 1950's – is just a remarkable achievement, but they're proud of it and downright cheerful about it. One particular person I spoke to used the phrase, "One country, one party, one leader," which rather startled me, because in America, we would never put up with such a thing, having one person telling us what to do.

But, in Cuba, for the moment, it works. Fidel Castro and Che Guevara and several others, including Antonio Nunez Jimenez, came down from the mountains and overthrew a decidedly vicious and unpopular dictator and have since then run the country without showing even the slightest evidence of personal greed. It can't last of course. Having somebody this graceful, this funny, this riveting and this benevolent in power for forty years is not what usually happens when one man seizes the reins of a country.

Something that should happen but won't happen, because Fidel himself is having so much fun, is that Fidel, who is seventy-three, should name a successor, retire, and then insist that multi-party elections take place soon thereafter. Maybe in five years. He should do this for the people he apparently loves, and they certainly love him, so that when he passes from the scene, the place isn't thrown into chaos.

As for Elian, I spoke to, among other people, a member of the American Mission here. He expressed the belief that Elian's plight really didn't matter much to the Cuban people and that they all knew that the demonstrations they had to go to in Havana were something that they had to do, and they went for the free food and drink.

But, I thought that he was quite wrong, because though people on the street don't talk to Americans about Elian, they will talk, and passionately, if pushed. Elian had a mother and a father and he still has a father and he should be returned to him here in Cuba.

It's true that Castro reneged on paying the middle class and wealthy for the things he took from them in the 60s, but this is no excuse for those people who fled Cuba after having being stripped of their wealth, to claim that there's nothing but misery back in the homeland. The quality of life is far more than fancy toys and gadgets and how many of them you have. The Cubans I've met are well fed, well educated, get free medical care and seemed genuinely delighted to have somebody running the country who cares for them very much. It can't last, but it seems to be enough for now. •

refiners and marketers of petroleum in the entire country. Its 1998 annual report put the company's revenues at more than $12 billion. It can produce 950,000 barrels a day. Tosco sells more than four billion gallons to the retail market

The refinery that supplies Long Island – and a good portion of the northeast – with much of its oil is Tosco's Bayview Refinery in Linden. Tosco also has a retail division of its own – five thousand outlets, in fact, which break down to: 2,400 company owned outlets; 1,300 company-controlled outlets; 1,100 independently owned retail outlets; 250 franchised retail outlets.

Tosco has 27,000 employees.

A recent study showed that on the average it cost American companies $4.48 per barrel to find oil and $4.12 to refine it. Thus, profits begin at $8.61 per barrel. This, of course, is an average. In many instances a company has to lay out more cash to discover oil.

While foreign countries slashed their oil output, how does that explain the drop in American workers involved in gas and oil extraction? Those numbers were down 7.2 percent from 1977 to 1998. (Over this same period, U.S. employed rose 2.3 percent.)" This is an indication that, as of yet, America is not that worried about an oil crisis and American industry is not gung ho to put more rigs out there.

Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson has been on a tour of the oil producing countries to persuade various energy ministers that the current high price of oil isn't doing a lot of people any good in the immediate future and will do no one any good in the long run. Yet if the secretary has meet with an apparent profusion of sympathetic ministers, as of yet there are no definite results of the trip.

Most recently Richardson met with His Excellency Sheik Saud Nasser al-Saud al-Sabah, Kuwait's Minister of Oil. The DOE press release: "The two ministers reaffirmed their intention to enhance mutal cooperation in the energy field and to continue the exchange of views regarding developments in the world oil market."

Well, what else could they say?

It was the same story when Richardson visited Saudi Arabia Oil Minister, Ali Naimi in Riyahdh. The DOE release: "The two ministers agreed that price volatility in world oil markets is detrimental to both producing and consuming nations. Minister Ali Naimi reiterated that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia will continue to review the oil supply and demand levels to ensure market stability..."

On his part, Richardson said, "But let me be clear that I did not come to Saudi Arabia to negotiate the price of oil. The United States believes that the market should determine the level of oil supply and oil prices on the world market."

What a difference a year or two makes.

In 1998, OPEC had reason to be worried about the low price of oil. In late March a meeting in Saudi Arabia, members and nonmembers of OPEC, confronted oil prices at 16.76 per barrel. (In early February of this year it was over $30.) One of the problems OPEC was facing was that nonmember countries, such as Mexico and Venuzeula, had gained more and more influence over the fixing of prices. OPEC had become less of a cartel than in the infamous '70s, when these mideastern countries basically held a sword of Damoceles over the head of Europe and the western hemisphere.

The talk at this meeting was to cut production. At the time the price per barrel was at its lowest since before the time of the Oil Embargo of the early '70s. A disasterous crash in Asia's economy had further weakened world demand for oil. The South American countries in particular had been ignoring OPEC quotas. Norway's Prime Minister said its Parliament had approved a cut of 3.2 million barrels a day. Other countries said they would be willing to cut no more than 2 million barrels a day. Ultimately the cuts agreed upon at that meeting were in the one million barrels a day range.

The meeting ended with no real consensus, particulary because OPEC nonmembers such as Mexico insisted on going their own way. But when OPEC met again in November of 1998 and again at the end of the winter, in March, 1999, all the countries involved felt they had no choice but to reduce oil production across the board by about seven percent. • into the program. Heimaey Island is completely uninhabited, though it is only a forty-mile boat trip from Reykjavik, the capital. Here they would put Willy into a one hundred and eighty thousand pound underwater nylon mesh pen where he could see and hear birds and other fish and other whales. This is a part of the world where aquatic creatures are in great abundance.

The scientists would abandon the original plan and, instead, they would try and wean Willy away from human contacts. There would be only five or six people, all scientists, on the site at any one time. And they would try and work him into tip top physical condition in anticipation for his release. They would work on his conditioning, having him do continuous wind sprints from one end of the 250-foot pen to the other, then do high leaps. Though this meant they would still have to reward him with food for having done his wind sprints and high leaps, they thought, well, it's a start.

Willy was moved from Oregon to Iceland in the fall of 1998. He was lifted out of the pool in Oregon in a nylon hammock like sling, put into something called a transport box and then with the use of a fork lift put aboard a UPS flatbed truck (I am not making this up) and driven from the aquarium to the airport. The transport box was then put onboard a U.S. Airforce C-17 cargo plane and Willy accompanied by his veterinarian and several other staff members, flown to Klettsvilk Bay at Heimaey Island. He is there today, out of the public spotlight.

Charles Vinich, who is an executive vice president for Ocean Futures, is very optimistic about things.

"This animal has met every challenge that has been thrown at him," he said. "Every time people say Willy can't do this, Willy does."

Willy, who has been living in this pen for a year and a half will live in it for at least another year and perhaps more. It will of course depend on how things go.

"He's come a long way," one of the Ocean Futures trainers, John Ratcliffe said. "He's made some big strides in the past months. If everything goes perfectly, he will be released in October 2000. Of course, things don't always go perfectly."

Among the many scientists who are not optimistic about the situation is Doug DeMaster, Director of the National Marine Laboratory of the Sand Point, Oregon.

"Socialization is going to be a huge issue," he said. "And then feeding himself is going to be the other big issue. It's pretty hard to guess what the acceptance of a strange animal by a herd of killer whales is going to be. I'm also worried about the herd. Willy who has been in captivity all his life, after twenty years might have a disease that could harm other whales. I know they are screening for viruses and bacteria, but it's not possible to screen for everything."

A final little bit of difficulty is that the Marine Mammal Commission has now indicated that prior to Willy's release he will have to be fitted with a transmitter that can send signals to a satellite so that researchers can locate him any time he surfaces. Such a transmitter doesn't exist for a creature this size and so, Ocean Futures – read, Craig McCaw – has given the National Marine Fisheries Service a one hundred and fifty thousand dollar grant to develop such a transmitter. The fishery service says it has the technology and they think they can have one made, tested and approved in about six months.

Aren't there people who know how to talk to dolphins and whales? Can't anybody ask Willy what it is that HE wants? •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of a New Islander #95
"What the hell is in here? Rocks?"

Men are mystified by women's purses. They wonder just what the hell we keep in them. They know there's a wallet, but they are baffled by what takes up the remaining space. They regard a woman's handbag as a Bermuda Triangle or black hole in space. They hate sticking their hand in. When you ask a man to get something from your purse, he brings you the whole bag and says, "Well, I don't know where to find it in there." Like they need a tiny map for their hand, to pop up at the top of the purse that says, "You Are Here."

Women start carrying purses as adolescents. First we have little cute Barbie wallets, a few twenty-five cent rings, and a tiny doll of some type. For me it was one of those horrid little troll dolls. Every girl had one and its hair had to stick up from the bag, it was mandatory. It takes only a few minutes to select the right bag. We see it on the hook in Kmart and beg mother.

In High School we graduate to stylish small bags that carry a wallet, a free Hallmark datebook, sunglasses, two extra tampons, complete make-up and clear nail polish for runs. It takes days at the mall to find the right bag for the money our cheap parents gave us because they're too stupid to realize that a handbag is a critical fashion statement that can affect your popularity for weeks to come. Parents whine and moan about rent and food while your life hangs in the balance.

As young women, our purses get a little bigger, we still carry all of the above, but we exchange the free Hallmark calender for a slim datebook and now we add a few pharmaceuticals; Midol, breath mints. We make sure the bag has enough extra room to carry one or two items for our boyfriends. It takes weeks at the mall to find the exact right bag that reflects our personality. Money is no object. The bag we chose will attract the man we want to marry.

As women move into career mode, the bag gets bigger and decidedly efficient. The wallet has a lot more slots for credit cards and receipts. The slim datebook has become a thick Day-Timer. The clear nail polish for runs is gone and a spare pair of pantyhose replaces it. There's room for a book to read during the commute. The bag has to look serious. We don't find the perfect bag, it finds us. When we see the right bag in a store or catalog, we buy and that's it, we have other things to do.

When you get married, your purse gets bigger right away. Now in addition to all of the above, you carry your husbands glasses, his chapstick, gloves, etc.. Married men know they are entitled to a designated amount of space in their wife's handbag (check your Ketubah) and they get annoyed if she can't carry their stuff because she's filled the space with something else. Our bag now has an outside pocket for bills to be sent. The bag is bought anywhere on the fly.

Baby Moms have the biggest bags of all. They must carry all of the above plus all of the baby gear; diapers, wipes, powder, IGA plastic bag for dirty diapers, change of baby clothes, bottles, toys, toys, toys. They have tossed the purse and dumped everything into diaper bag. You can't believe how much a woman can stuff in a diaper bag. The purse-diaperbag isn't ready to go until it weighs three times more than the baby. You got the bag at the baby shower.

Married Moms with older kids leave the diaper bag behind for a big tote bag. They have all of their own stuff, all of hubby's, plus a small first aid kit, snacks for kids, a pair of clean socks/ underwear for whichever kid or husband needs them, slots for ingoing and outgoing mail. They got the bag at the goodies section.

Divorced Moms don't have to carry all the guy stuff anymore, but they keep the big bag anyway, just to be optimistic. In the meantime they fill the designated guyspace with hand cream, an affirmations book, make-up, cologne; Eau de Lasagna is what I carry. We are buying bags at Kmart again.

Mature women get to go back to the young women size purses. They carry wallet, some make-up, lots of pharmaceuticals (his & hers), his & hers glasses, and a BOOK! A real book, not Pat the Bunny or Cat in the Hat, or a self-help book, but a genuine grown-up book, with words and no pictures!

Mature women have the nicest bags.

Why?

Because they have built up an incredible selection over the years!

man approached by four police officers in a police car is a far different situation than a man approached by four men in street clothes in an unmarked car.

All four of them were so scared out of their minds they couldn't think straight. The police training is supposed to promote confidence and bravery, not the opposite.

Police officers, unprovoked, are not supposed to go out and shoot people.

Well, the police training seems to be lacking in some way and you can be sure there will be a civil suit (a la O. J.) and the department is going to have to pay through the nose for what is surely the ultimate violation of Diallo's civil rights. Paying through the nose is going to be us, the taxpayers, who employ these people and those who trained them. So there is justice in that.

Should these four officers have been punished, convicted or otherwise been made to be responsible for their actions?

A jury of eight whites and four blacks obviously did not think so. I think the officers behaved terribly and they should have been convicted of reckless endangerment, sentenced to thirty days and put on probation for a year. I think they should be suspended from the force for that year.

And after that given only desk jobs.

Otherwise, how do you prevent this from happening again? •

TWENTY YEARS AGO
"Want to Live on a Golf Course?"
February 29, 1980

The Town of Shelter Island has a year-round job opening for somebody to take care of the Shelter Island Country Club. The Town bought the Country Club, which consists of a nine hole golf course and a clubhouse in 1978 to keep it from being developed. Since that time, they've been unable to find anyone to take the year-round caretaker's position.

"Frankly, we're looking for someone who's young, has a beard and not too much ambition," said Town Supervisor Barbara Keyser. "It would be ideal for someone that wants an old-fashioned way of life."

The job entails mowing the golf course lawn occasionally, gardening and hedgetrimming. The clubhouse should be maintained, but it is also available to be lived in year-round. There is a refrigerator that dates back to 1921 and a stove that probably goes back to 1902. But there is a magnificent view, including the Montauk Lighthouse across Peconic Bay.

Pay for the caretaking job is only $7,000 to $8,000 a year depending upon experience. But the caretaker can live in the clubhouse and the Town Board would allow the caretaker to supplement his or her income by scalloping in the fall and winter.

Riverhead Woman Named East End's "Woman Of The Year"

Sherry Patterson of Riverhead has been named the East End Women's Network "2000 Woman of the Year" and will be honored at a dinner on Wednesday, March 15, 2000 at Giorgio's at Fox Hill.

Sherry's contributions to both her profession and her community are numerous and far ranging. As office manager/broker/appraiser for Edwin Fishel Tuccio Real Estate since 1982, Sherry has served on the Riverhead Zoning Board of the Appeals and chaired the Riverhead Affordable Housing Task Force.

She has served on the Boards of the Riverhead Public Library, Riley Avenue Parents Association, and Riverhead Rotary, where she was both the first sponsored woman member and first woman President. Sherry co-chaired the Okeanos Fundraising Committee and currently serves as an Advisory Council member to The Retreat, an agency that helps victims of domestic violence and on the Women's Wellness Series Committee at Central Suffolk Hospital.

Through Rotary Sherry and her family have hosted numerous exchange students. As part of Rotary's Gift of Life Program this past Fall, Sherry and her family hosted a young girl from Trinidad-Tobago, who needed heart surgery not available in her homeland. Not only did she welcome the girl and her mother in her home for more than a month, she coordinated transportation, often driving herself, to and from Stony Brook University Medical Center.

According to colleague and friend Rosemary Danielowich, "Sherry's activities in the community and her dedication to improving the quality of life in Riverhead has gained her the respect of all."

First presented in 1982, the EEWN's Woman of the Year award is given to a woman who is active in a field of commerce, education, government or the arts; recognized by her peers as a positive force in her profession and must have a proven record of direct and indirect leadership, service, commitment, achievement and character.

Past winners include Marietta Seaman, Town of Southampton; Pam Giacoia, Town of Southampton; Sarah Foulke, Cornell Cooperative Extension; Monique Gablenz, Riverhead Industrial Development Agency; and Carolyn London, J. Sauer Optician.

The EEWN brings together a cross-section of women who reflect the diversity of occupations on Long Island's East End for the purpose of networking and support. Meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of each month at area restaurants, alternation between the North and South Forks. For more information about the Woman of the Year Dinner, please call 548-6080.

To create an accurate environment in his forthcoming motion picture, Pollock, actor Ed Harris, who stars as the abstract expressionist painter Jackson Pollock and also directs the film, wanted actual paintings instead of photographic reproductions. Genuine art works by Pollock and his wife, Lee Krasner (played by Marcia Gay Harden) are too valuable to use as movie props. Instead, Harris and his production team made facsimiles of actual paintings, drawings and collages by both artists. Contributions we also made by Ed Harris himself, who painted several canvases while acting the Pollock role. This coming season, the Pollock-Krasner House and Study Center will exhibit a selection of those replicas, lent by Pollock Film, Inc. courtesy of the Brant Foundation.

DAN TRAVELS

The New York Palace For a Truly Royal Experience

Magic, pure magic. These are the only words that can be used to describe a mid-winter getaway to the cultural, cullinary and entertainment capital of the world, NYC. With our two year-old twin girls safely stowed with their Grammy for the weekend, Manhattan was about as far away as we wanted to be.

Our choice of hotel, the New York Palace, was an easy one. Whatever the excuse du jour we are using to getaway, birthday, anniversary, nervous breakdown, etc, this bastion of luxury and warmth is the perfect backdrop for a weekend sure to be filled with decadent dining, hobnobbing with the global elite (if only vicariously) and being deliciously pampered. Something we all need from time to time.

The New York Palace, formerly a property of Leona and Harry Helmsley, has gone through a renaissance akin to Europe's emergence from the Dark Ages since being acquired by Prince Jefri, a.k.a. "The Sultan of Brunei" in 1993. The New York Palace has been reinvented as one of the most sumptuous and accommodating hotels in the world. The Palace is one of only fifty-seven hotels in the United States, Canada, and the Caribbean to receive the AAA Five Diamond rating, a rating reserved only for properties with uncompromising standards of excellence in all aspects of its operation.

Located on Madison Avenue between 50th and 51st, the New York Palace faces St. Patrick's Cathedral. And is just west of Fifth Avenue, one of the most prestigious shopping addresses in the world. But what is most romantic about the Palace is its colorful history.

Built in 1882 as the home of railroad baron and "bon vivant" Henry Villard, the mansion was modeled after the Palazzo dell Cancellaria in Rome by the celebrated architectural firm of McKim, Mead & White.

The estate appeared to be a cluster of brownstones, when in fact it contained several separate sections which were to be living quarters for several families.

Villard had precious little time to actually enjoy the digs that he conceived. Shortly after the mansion's completion, he went bankrupt. The Villard House was sold to Elisabeth Mills Reid, whose family owned the New York Tribune. Then in 1948 it was purchased by the owners of the land that the mansion now rests on, the Archdiocese of New York.

After being closed to the public for many years, the Archdiocese leased the Villard Houses to the Helmsleys in 1974. This transaction cleared the way for permits to be granted for them to build their "Palace" high in sky. The Villard Houses, though, were sorely and sadly under-utilized by the Helmsley's. Relegated to the lowly status of tea and banquet rooms, the Helmsleys lacked the vision to use these rooms to their full potential.

Enter the Sultan of Brunei. After successfully revamping both the hotels image and physical space, it was time to woo a four-star restaurant. This is where the Le Cirque 2000 and Sirio Maccioni come in.

This was our first time dining under the reincarnated big top since its relocation from the Mayfair Hotel. To say that the restaurant's atmosphere has been transformed is putting it mildly. Patrons of the old Le Cirque will recall the whimsical murals of monkeys dressed as French aristocrats, which also adorned everything from plates to ashtrays. They will also remember a posh, cramped dining room.

The monkeys are no more; they are considered bad luck in Bruneian cosmology. Lions and circus accoutrements have taken their place. Gone also, is the stuffy attitude. The very charming Sirio Maccioni and sons seem to have gone out of their way to make certain that customers feel welcomed in their new home.

However, the most breath-taking transformation is the interior of the restaurant. The combination of gilded-age opulence replete with pre-Raphaelite murals and gold, gilt ceilings and the art-deco, new-age circus design of Adam Tihany at first gives one the uneasy feeling of cognitive dissonance. But a few minutes after settling into a plush, funky hi-back chair with a nice Cabernet, it all starts to come together nicely.

And of course, the main reason for coming to Le Cirque – the sumptuous and creative cuisine of Sottha Khunn who finally accepted the executive chef position after working with Daniel Boulud at the old Le Cirque. The signature dishes such as the scallop black-tie and paupiette of sea bass were as heavenly as ever. The halibut au poivre was magnificent and the risotto with lobster, coral and rosemary was out of this world.

For dessert it was a tough choice to forgo the legendary créme brulee which Sirio introduced to America in the 70's. No, this time the decision was made for us. A triumvirate of almost "too beautiful to eat" works of art were brought out to us for my husband's birthday. An adorable "chocolate stove" complete with chocolate opera cake, Jacque's Napoleon – a light, puff pastry with berries and cream, and bombolini-warm brioche filled and topped with vanilla cream. An exquisite climax to an already heady dining experience.

Sirio Maccioni has proven once again that he has the magical gift of bringing all the elements of fine dining together and has surpassed even the highest standards that New York restaurants are implicitly held to live up to. The marriage of the New York Palace and Le Cirque seems to be a match made in heaven.

Couple this truly New York experience with shopping, theatre, the arts and the countless other cultural (and counter-cultural activities?), there is no reason to travel further than the Mid-Town Tunnel to get away, if only for the weekend.

–Stephanie Selloni

Sales Tax Break For Shoppers

It's about time that the sales tax exemption is finally here to stay. Suffolk County Executive Robert J. Gaffney today reminded consumers that the law he signed last June eliminating the sales tax on clothing and footwear purchases under $110 took effect Wednesday, March 1. Suffolk is the only county in the downstate region to have eliminated its portion of the sales tax.

"In addition to putting hundreds of dollars each year back into the pockets of hard working families, our decision to repeal the sales tax on clothing will help local business and stimulate the economy," Gaffney said. "I'm pleased that we were able to accomplish the repeal of this tax even as we reduced general fund property taxes in 2000 for the seventh year in a row."

The County Executive credited the County Legislature for working with him to eliminate the tax without impacting on the County's strong financial condition. "Our ability to start the new millennium by repealing the tax is a result of bi-partisan cooperation," said Gaffney. "With the cooperation of the Legislature, we approached this issue responsibly, making sure that the County's fiscal condition would not be compromised."

Prior to March 1, 2000, the sales tax on clothing purchases in Suffolk County stood at 8 1/4 percent, according to Gaffney. Of that amount, four percent was collected by the State, and 4 1/4 percent by the County. Both the State and County portions of the tax have been eliminated in Suffolk County.

This means, that we can shop and save a significant amount of money on our purchases of clothing and footwear under $110. So shop away. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"HUSBANDS AND WIVES" AT NIGHTINGALE GALLERY

Billed as works by artists and their artist companions, Nightingale Gallery's current show tempts the spectator to find similarities among the creative couples on view. Even if commonalties aren't obvious (or even nonexistent), it's a fascinating game, nonetheless, to perceive such connections.

Helen Harrison's sculpture-like work is effective as both an aesthetic use of materials and as a resemblance to an ancient time piece. And while husband Roy Nicholson's painting in this show doesn't relate to his previous project about time (where he represented each week with a visual image), his content may just bear a likeness to Ms. Harrison's title ("In and Out"). If his current abstraction is part of his garden series, there's a marked difference between the garden and the barrier which separates it from the outside—thus, its "in and outness."

Rima and Ned Smyth also share common, yet subtle bonds. Ms. Smyth's arresting beeswax shapes on wood appear archetypal in their primal configurations; Mr. Smyth's three mosaic sculptures deal with shapes as well— although geometrical in nature, they signify the fundamental forms marking life and death.

It's obvious that printers Claire Romano and John Ross work in the same medium and draw upon both their environment (often Venice, Italy) and history for inspiration, although Ms. Romano's collagraph print here does not reflect this particular focus. It does, however, still mirror her love of color and attention to line.

Lucille and David Paulsen are another couple who are drawn to their environs, Mr. Paulson with his exterior landscapes and Ms. Paulsen with her interior still lifes. Both artists bring a sense of nostalgia and lusciousness to their creations as well. There's a similar sense of the past at work, too, with abstractions by Dan Welden and Kryn Placke, Ms. Placke's shapes ("The Wedding Set") evoking a vague time and place which rely less on Constructivism than Mr. Welden's piece. Even so, Mr. Welden's endeavor features somewhat similar forms that seem attached to a more distinct setting.

"The Wedding Set" by Kryn Placke

There are some couples, however, who don't appear connected, artistically speaking. For example, Linda Cappello's figure drawing seems spontaneous and gestural; John Capello's sculptural figure derives from a contradictory sensibility: detailed, controlled and classical. Viva la difference.

"Husbands and Wives" will be on view at Water Mill's Nightingale Gallery until March 27.

Honoring the Artist: Charles Wildbank

Q: Since we last interviewed you as our cover artist, is there anything that has particularly moved you, gotten your attention, on the current events front? This can be personally or professionally.

A: By nature, I am almost always attentive and, therefore, concerned if any current issue affects people at large, artists included. I am heartened when the arts receive support. I also don't really believe that censorship would ever work. Rather, I would let the citizens vote using a generalized rating system like in the movies, so that parents can determine for themselves whether they feel an art exhibit is suitable for their children. I am most interested, however, in events that pertain to significant breakthroughs or advancement of humankind, like a new cure, an energy solution, a new talented genius.

Q: Let's go from the big issues that move you to more personal issues that inspire you. Does where you are (the place) influence you? Do the circumstances determine what you paint? For example, does the winter motivate you less? You're spending time in Florida now. Will it motivate you more?

A: Yes, where I am and under what circumstances make it easier for me to be inspired or moved by what to paint. I just returned from a trip to the Southwest and fell in love with it. At other times, my favorite place to paint was in the Florida Keys, and I am going back and looking very much forward to it. As for when to paint, I have reached a point in my life where art is all my being, whether I travel or stay home. When traveling, I bring my camera along or even make a mental note on what to paint soon. A real desire to paint, however, would stem mostly from my desire to bring something into existence. Since I love being surrounded by paintings, I would always have a hunger for certain new paintings, never before done, to exist, so I paint them.

Q: How does your hearing impairment impact on your work, if at all? It's a question I imagine people wonder about.

A: It's not a problem for me; there can be certain advantages like being able to conveniently make it quiet for me while I paint. I think of painting as an ability that I can have in spite of my hearing disability, and for that I am really glad. Maybe one would get a similar answer from Beethoven.

Q: What other qualities do you have that you think have been an advantage?

A: Some of my favorite qualities revolve around my high levels of tolerance and endurance. The hard knocks in my life only make me stronger it seems. I take great comfort in my individuality which is most indulged in my painting.

Q: What are your expectations for the Millennium?

A: Personally, I am seeking new relationships. I also traveled 15,000 miles in the last six months and relished in seeing many old friends.

Professionally, I'd like to do some more soul-searching portraits. I'd like to be creative with Photorealism, something newer, maybe more oils and texture. A richer and more personal experience.

Q: What would the Millennium bring if you weren't a painter?

A: I guess I would go back to my other talent in the theater such as mime like Marcel Marceau or Le Cirque du Soleil de Montreal.

Q: Let's forget the future and the Millennium. What's your favorite day like now – when you're not working? What's your worst day like?

A: Many of my favorites have been the sunny and bright type, near or on the ocean, on some other island or kayaking in some quiet national park or wilderness. I have this itch to travel to more points on the compass and into other hemispheres. My worst day? When someone lies to me when the obvious is otherwise.

Q: What do you like best about painting?

A: I love it when I discover that some people do share my joy.

Q: I can attest to that – people do share your joy. Oops, that's not a question.

Guy DeFraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Time continues to creep inexorably towards the grandiose Academy of Arts and Sciences Award Ceremony wherein, too frequently, Art has been given a seat way back in the rear and Science is, as in television, an up-front numbers game and, celluloid thespians fret and strut their hours on a stage! exhibiting their uneasiness and the most noticeable gowns and deconstructed tuxedos. No, I will not suffer you further with bilious commentary that attempts to dull the gold of Oscar's monetary worth... except... remember... Rocky was once elected Best Picture. So, let us forge ahead, cast our votes and root for our favorites, just as we do with the Miss America Contest and not give a hoot about any signs of intelligence.

ACADEMY AWARDS? FORGET IT!

Let me duck under the cozy covers of movies around that will never come up in Oscar nominations... well. one never knows!

As noted, last week, the growing-up-Leonardo's return voyage, following his Titantic, cresting stardom, was a rough, choppy, luxury cruise that left him high and dry... beached on that desert island.

There's the ex-screamly popular Scream 3, that is a jokey-scream-of-a-horror picture that has its makers screaming bloody murder all the way to the bank.

Wonder Boys has Michael Douglas cuddly in a mid-life crisis that only a movie professor can have: he has pretty young students (and they're just the boys!), an extra-marital, impregnated, affair with his chancellor, Francis McDormand. His strongest tie is to a gifted, troubled student, Tobey Maguire, who shoots a dog. This affords the movie some raucous laffs. You take it from there. Fashion note: Michael's red scarf and no pipe. No wonder.

If you get a call from the Ephron sisters Nora or Delia inviting you to their movie Hanging Up , directed by Diane Keaton, hang up! Meg Ryan, Ms. Keaton and Lisa Kudrow can't act their way out of this wet (with some tears), paper baggy, cellphoney, sister act accompanying an annoying, dying, father, Walter (same old grumpy old man) Matthau. Pickup on TV's Lifetime programming, instead.

The Whole Nine Yards and
No Oscar Chance Movies

Surprisingly, Pitch Black is in a bright, right on key for a Sci-Fi movie financed by body parts from 3 or 4 of some of the better ones in this one dine only at a fashionably late hour... when it is night ... AND a total eclipse is on the way E-e-e-k!

A YARN WITH YARDS AND YARDS UNRAVELING

Wee Willie Willis (cousin Brucie or David, as his co-producer credit reads) steps out of his mock macho, action adventure mode to do some Moonlighting in a not so black, black comedy, The Whole Nine Yards. Succumbing to the highly contagious make-fun-of-the-Mob bug (there's a rash of them, even on TV... They're going around), Spruce Bruce becomes Jimmy (the Tulip) Tudeski, a top notch hit man with about seventy-eight notches and he sent tulips to all their funerals. He has hot-footed it to Canada to get away from the heat sizzling in Chicago, generated by the mob he turned evidence on..and especially the boss, Vinnie (GoGo) Gogolak played in a slow burned-up-way by Kevin Pollak. For some variety, the mob is sort of Mittle European so, GoGo speaks wery, wery bed English. However, GoGo's heavy hitter isn't Slavic but, he is HEAVY... he's Michael Clarke Duncan, the Jolly Green Mile giant with an earring and big gun. His name is Frankie Figs.

SHLEMOZZLE'S NEIGHBOR IS A SIZZLER

Tulip has taken a house in a sweet Montreal suburb next door to a lub of a dentist, Oz Oseransky, played by that *Friends*ly guy, Matthew Perry. Oz married a French-Canadian, sleep-around witch, Sophie, so cruelly preyed by Rosanna Arquette. Her mother is just as bad. Oz's life is hell and when he recognizes Tulip, hell's fires burn out of control and he stupidly tells Sophie. Turns out... Tulip likes Oz... they both hate mayo on hamburgers, so, when Sophie gets the bright idea of sending Oz to Chicago to get GoGo to give them big bucks for Tulip's location... Oz goes but, only following his wonderful receptionist's advice to get away from his wife and home and not rat on Tulip, but get sex! In Chicago, Frankie Figs is waiting for him. He's taken to GoGo and Company AND Tulip's gorgeous wife Cynthia, gorgeous is right! She's Natasha Henstridge. Oz gets the business from GoGo and the sex from Cynthia, if you can believe it, considering that Perry plays Oz like Lou Costello... pratfalls, mugging and even the old surprised-when-drink-ing-spit-back-into-the-glass routine.

From that point on the plot gets thicker than a ham bone pea soup with turns, spins, deceits, conceits, cheats, steals, upsets, Niagara Fall, and the wondrous Amanda Peet as Jill, Oz's receptionist who is so warmly (flinch) winsome and wise... even in the scenes where she is wearing only a gun... you want to give her a hug. I'm not sure that came out the way I meant it. Anyway, winsome, losesome. This movie has a lot of bright spots but, all in all it really doesn't make it. No Oscars, not even a People's Choice Award.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS, and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Papers Film Festival.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Some years ago broccoli rabe, the green, leafy vegetable with budding stalks, might have gone unrecognized in the markets. Today it is a familiar, hearty and popular vegetable. Italians, who tend to call it broccoli di rape or rapini, have long esteemed its pungent, bitter taste. The vegetable, which can add a zesty lift to bland foods such as mild pasta and potato dishes, appears to have found favor in our culinary repertoire.

Although available most of the year, but most plentiful in late fall through spring, I enjoy its aggressive flavor in the chill of winter when tossed with a sturdy mix of sausage and potato. The trio of ingredients makes a delicious, one pot meal. Another favorite is cook it together with orecchiette, the small concave pasta referred to as "little ears." This adaptation of Giuliano Bugialli's Pasta E Broccoli, in which the vegetable's leafy stems and flowers are cooked with the pasta, rather than separately, is served with a heady mixture of sauteed olive oil, garlic, hot pepper flakes and an abundant amount of capers.

When purchasing broccoli rabe be sure it is very green, as it yellows with age, with firm stems and unbruised flowerets. Broccoli rabe is low in calories, about 40 per cup and is an excellent source of vitamins A and C.

BROCCOLI RABE WITH SWEET SAUSAGE AND POTATO

A trio of ingredients for a delicious one-pot meal
Serves 4

2 bunches broccoli rabe, about 1 pound each
4 sweet Italian sausage, casings removed
1 1/2 pounds Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and sliced 1/2-inch thick
4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
4 cloves garlic, cut into thin slivers
1/2 cup chicken broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Trim the broccoli rabe, discarding the tough bottom stems. Separate the stems from the flowerets and place them in 2 separate bowls of cold water to soak for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, bring a large pot of salted water to the boil. Drain the leaves and put into the boiling water. Cook for 2 minutes and add the drained flowers. Cook for 1 minute longer and, with a slotted spoon, remove greens to a colander to drain, reserving the cooking water. Put potato slices in the same water the broccoli rabe cooked in and cook at a brisk simmer, covered for about 15-18 minutes until tender but not falling apart.

2. Meanwhile, warm oil in a large skillet and add garlic cloves. Saute for 2-3 minutes; do not allow to brown. Add sausage meat and cook breaking up the sausage with the back of a fork until crumbly. Cook until the sausage loses its red color, about 6-7 minutes. Add the chicken broth and bring to the boil. Place the broccoli rabe over the sausage and season with salt and pepper. Layer the potato slices over the greens and add seasonings to taste. Cover pan and simmer over low heat for 6-8 minutes to heat the mixture through. Serve hot.

PASTA E BROCCOLIRAB

Broccoli rabe probably has more in common with bitter leafy greens than with broccoli. The garlic, capers and olive oil dressing offset the slightly bitter taste of the vegetable.

Serves 4-5

1 large bunch broccoli rabe
Coarse salt
1 pound dried pasta such as orecchiette or fusilli
1/3 cup olive oil
2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Pinch hot red pepper flakes
4 tablespoons capers packed in wine vinegar, drained
1/2 cup chicken broth or pasta cooking water
3-4 tablespoon coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

1. Trim the broccoli rabe, discarding the tough bottom stems. Separate the stems from the flowerets and place them in 2 separate bowls of cold water to soak for 15 minutes.

2. Bring a large pot of cold water to a boil, add coarse salt to taste then add the pasta and the leafy stems. Two minutes after adding the leaves, add the flowerets. The pasta should be cooked al dente in about 8-12 minutes according to the brand. At the end of the cooking time, all three ingredients should emerge properly cooked.

3. Meanwhile, warm the oil in a skillet and saute the garlic for 40-50 seconds, until barely golden. Season with salt, pepper and the red pepper flakes. Add the capers and saute for 2 minutes longer. Add broth or pasta water, simmer and keep warm.

4. Drain the contents of the saucepan and transfer to a large, warmed serving dish. Pour the sauce over and mix well. Sprinkle with parsley and serve immediately.

Dishes Replace Fat With Great Taste

What do 58 million Americans have in common? According to the American Dietetic Association, that's how many of us are overweight. In the new millennium, many will be seeking ways to reduce fat and caloric intake while continuing to eat the foods we enjoy.

Nutrition experts advise that there's no reason to sacrifice taste for a healthier diet. One simple solution is to substitute healthy alternatives when preparing foods. For example, a pasteurized egg alternative like Egg Beaters real egg product provides the great taste of traditional shell eggs, but with no fat or cholesterol. Made from real egg whites, Egg Beaters has less than half the calories of whole eggs and contains no preservatives.

For an easy and delicious way to eat more healthfully, try this low-fat, low-cholesterol dishes:

Western Omelet
Makes 2 servings
Prep Time: 15 minutes
Cook Time: 10 minutes

1/2 cup finely chopped red or green bell pepper
2 teaspoons Fleischmann's Margarine, divided
1/3 cup cubed cooked potato
1 cup Egg Beaters
2 slices turkey bacon, diced
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
Fresh oregano sprig, for garnish

In an 8-inch nonstick skillet, over medium heat, sauté bell pepper, potato, turkey bacon and dried oregano in 1 teaspoon margarine until tender.* Remove from skillet; keep warm.

In same skillet, over medium heat, melt remaining margarine. Pour Egg Beaters into skillet. Cook, lifting edges to allow uncooked portion to flow underneath. When almost set, spoon vegetable mixture over half of omelet. Fold other half over vegetable mixture; set onto serving plate. Garnish with fresh oregano.

Time To Tile? Perhaps Not

Tile showers are extremely popular in today's bathrooms. However, tile floors are difficult and expensive to install, and tile walls are troublesome to keep clean. If you want help installing your tile, call Southampton Brick and Tile, 283-8088.

But, fortunately, products have been developed to eliminate these difficulties. From acrylic shower receptors, which eliminate the need for a tile floor, to easy-to-clean fiberglass modules that look like real ceramic tile walls.

If you want a tile shower without the expense and hassle of a tile floor, acrylic shower receptors are for you. Essentially one-piece shower floors, these waterproof receptors eliminate the need for tile shower floors. They are easy and inexpensive to install and, best of all, they are easy to clean. Blackman Plumbing in Southampton (283-1500) will be glad to help.

Acrylic shower receptors from Kohler Co., a global leader in kitchen and bath design, feature anti-slip floor patterns and off-center drains that are comfortably out of the way.

They are available in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and colors to fit most any bathroom size and décor, making them a perfect choice for both remodeling and new construction.

If you like the look of tile on the walls but don't want the inconvenience of installing or cleaning it, there is another product for you. Terracina, a new line of fiberglass shower modules from Kohler, features the timeless look of ceramic tile. Affordable and easy to install, they provide an exceptional alternative to tile.

Real ceramic tile and grout were used to make the molds, furnishing an authentic tile appearance. A unique pattern features a row of "diamond" tiles at eye level to create interest and add style.

Terracina bath and shower modules are offered in a variety of colors and sizes, including a spacious sixty inch unit for homeowners who prefer a larger shower. Built-in ledges and seats add convenience and comfort.

For more information on these or any other Kohler product, call 1-800-4-KOHLER or see the web site at www.kohlerco.com.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

This Saturday night, we will be holding our annual Dinner-Dance at Giorgio's of Fox Hill Country Club. Each year at this event, we honor a grower with the Amherst Davis Memorial Farmer Citizen Award for distinguished and selfless service, not to agriculture alone, but to the recipient's community as well. This award emphasizes the contributory role of the individual farmer in civic achievement, as well as to the endurance on Long Island of a healthy and productive agricultural industry. I am especially pleased that the committee has selected my good buddy Nate Corwin of Calverton as recipient of this prestigious award. Nate is a long-time friend and golfing buddy who is part of the gang that travels to St. Croix with me each year for a golf vacation. He is a great guy with huge heart and terrific sense of fun. Having said that, I also have to say that it was quite the experience getting stuck with Nate in a condo when Mother Nature went wild with Hurricane Lenny!

Nate is a true Riverhead Town native. He grew up in Calverton next door to his grandfather's potato and vegetable farm, J.S. Edwards and Son. Working there as a child, Nate knew he wanted to farm when he grew up. While attending Riverhead High School, Nate grew potatoes for a Vocational Agriculture class project, the last Vocational Ag class offered at the school and served as vice president of the Future Farmers of America. Around 1970, he went to work for Ivy Acres. At the time, he was one of three who worked there. Ivy Acres has since grown to twenty-two acres and 250 employees, and Nate has done just about every job on his way up to his current position of Production Manager.

Nate became a member of Farm Bureau in the early 70's, and was soon helping out at the Riverhead Country Fair and other Farm Bureau activities. He came onto the board of directors for the first time in 1984. He served as treasurer, vice president, and ultimately, president from 1993 to 1995. Over the years, Nate has become a familiar face at any Farm Bureau event, always willing to roll up his sleeves and pitch in, always preferring to remain behind the scenes.

His commitment to his community does not stop with Farm Bureau. He served as president of the Oak Hill Civic Association, as a trustee and deacon of the Baiting Hollow Congregational Church, and as president of Long Island Flower Growers Association. He is the current president of the Baiting Hollow Library, vice president of the Calverton Civic Association, and a member of the Suffolk County Farmland Select Committee. In his position at Ivy Acres, Nate has worked on various volunteer projects, including planting trees along the roads of Riverhead Town and working on the flower boxes downtown.

Nate and his wife of thirty-six years, Leslie, have three children and four grandchildren. Leslie is an artist and a Puppy Walker. She and Nate provide a home for future "seeing eye" dogs for the Guide Dog Foundation of Smithtown and he helps Leslie train these special pups.

For nearly thirty years, Nate has consistently proven himself an active supporter of Long Island's agricultural industry, as well as one of its most tireless advocates. As a friend and colleague, as well as a representative of Long Island Farm Bureau, it gives me great personal satisfaction that Nate will finally be recognized for all he has done for others over the years.

Joseph Gergela, III is Executive Director, Long Island Farm Bureau

Smart Choices For Improving Your Health-Esteem

While some of today's most common health concerns are not life threatening, they can seriously threaten quality of life. Many revolutionary health advances of late are those that improve mood, energy levels, memory, physical appearance and sexual function.

"In the past, conditions like mild depression, male urinary problems, general fatigue, and varicose veins have been dismissed as 'frivolous' or not serious enough to warrant medical attention. But many of them do cause pain, affect social relationships and impact health," says Leslie Beck, B.Sc., RD, a Westhampton registered dietitian.

"Natural health products that help people feel better and look better will contribute to improvements in their relations with family, friends and coworkers," continues Beck. "And when people feel better, they're much more likely to eat better and exercise."

Natural health products work to improve what can be referred to as your "health-esteem"-a combination of your health and your self-esteem. Herbal supplements are increasingly accepted as improving one's health-esteem. In fact, the U.S. herbal supplement business has boomed to $4 billion a year.

"Scientifically tested and proven supplements can be a safe and effective choice for people who want to maintain or enhance a healthy lifestyle," states Derrick DeSilva, Jr., MD, president of the American Neutraceutical Association and a practicing internist.

However, according to a recent study in the Journal of the American Medical Association, most people who use natural supplements do so without consulting a doctor.

In light of this fact, Dr. DeSilva recommends that consumers do their homework when selecting a supplement. DeSilva recommends that one should:

• Look for a Quality Seal on the package verifying that the specific extract used in the product has been proven effective and safe in clinical trials. (This is important because different extracts from the same herb may vary in how well they work.)

• Make sure the manufacturer guarantees that every package of the product consistently contains exactly what the label says. (Some manufacturers have been found to market products that do not contain the ingredients and quantities listed on their labels.)

• Look for products manufactured by a company with a proven history of high quality standards. Call their 800 number or visit their website and request clinical studies; check if the manufacturer offers a money-back or quality guarantee; and always avoid products with vague labels.

"Pharmaton Natural Health Products are at the top of my list of high quality supplements because they have always gone the extra mile to give consumers the best supplements possible," DeSilva remarks.

Pharmaton markets some of America's top health-esteem supplements, like Ginkoba for memory and Ginsana for energy, as well as a range of products for mood support, prostale health, leg vein health, women's health and others. To learn more about supplements for improving health esteem, you can visit the Pharmaton website at www.pharmaton.com .

Fountain Of Youth Found In A Pine Tree

The focus for beauty today is shifting from "young" to "healthy." Looking great at fifty, sixty and seventy is becoming increasingly important as baby boomers climb the age ladder.

According to researchers, a compound called Pycnogenol found in French maritime pine trees, has antioxidant properties fifty times greater than vitamin E. It is usually taken as a nutritional supplement but now can be applied topically.

"Internally, Pycnogenol has many benefits, but since it is entering into the blood stream, the body disperses it to many different outlets," says biologist and anti-oxidant expert Linda Miles. "For people who want to see the visual anti-aging effects on their skin, it makes sense to apply the Pycnogenol directly to that organ." When it's applied topically, the skin is the sole recipient of the antioxidant nutrients found in the compound, thereby producing faster results on the skin, Miles contends.

"This is a very cutting edge discovery in skin-care," says David Stern, president of DermaE, the first company in the U.S. to develop topical Pycnogenol products.

POLICE BLOTTER

Another lumber larceny was committed in Bridgehampton last week. Donald Disbrow, the owner of a farm stand on the corner of Sagg and Ocean Roads, reported to police that seven antique oak beams, each eighteen foot piece weighing 400 pounds, were stolen from the farm stand. The purloined planks are valued at $2,500.

A Bridgehampton woman, apparently offended by her neighbor's dog leaving "deposits" on her lawn, tacked a note on the neighbor's door asking him to have his dog take its business elsewhere. Well, the neighbor was apparently offended by her offense and called her, threatening to kill her. Police told him to leash his dog and no charges were filed.

A Sag Harbor man complained that on February 8 an unknown assailant threw a rather large rock through his bathroom window. The rock landed in the toilet, breaking the plastic toilet bowl cover on its way in.

Two days after his car was stolen from Main Street in Southampton, Joao Monteiro found it on Middle Line Highway in Water Mill. However, it had all of its windows broken, its tires slashed, its hood and roof dented and a windshield wiper stuck in its dashboard vent.

Some bandit bandleaders broke into the Sag Harbor Music Shoppe on Main Street and made off with about $14,000 worth of instruments and equipment. Included in the ensemble were saxophones, guitars, a MIDI keyboard and eighteen microphones to equip the vocal section. Police have no leads on the musical perpetrators.

A Southampton youth went on a joy ride and wound up with a charge of two felonies, grand larceny and possession of stolen property on February 18. The 16-year-old allegedly stole a 1997 Ford Explorer from Yawney Motors on Hill Street and headed into Noyac. Apparently the teenager didn't read the warning most sport utility vehicles have on them alerting the driver that it may not handle like a normal passenger car, as the youth rolled the vehicle over and then abandoned it. The reckless driver was sent to the Suffolk County Jail after failing to pay $6,000 in bail.

Terrina McKnight of Riverside was arrested for littering at her home. According to police she was asked repeatedly to remove trash from her yard. Her arrest followed her failure to clean up her act.

Frank Alfisi of Montauk was arrested in East Quogue last Friday. According to police, Alfisi was stopped for a traffic violation, but after answering a few questions he became hostile and had to be cuffed. He then tried to get out of the handcuffs, and so then he was placed in a straitjacket. Police then discovered the car Mr. Alfisi was driving was stolen and so a charge of criminal possession of stolen property in the fourth degree was added on to his disorderly conduct charge.

Dan's LETTERS

LEISURE TIME OUT EAST

Dear Dan,

We are East Hampton homeowners and year-round weekenders. We enjoy coming out and look forward to picking up Dan's Papers to help plan our weekend activities with our four year old son, Brian. We especially enjoyed Tales & Scales at Guild Hall in East Hampton and the opera Hansel and Gretel at the Montauk Community Church. Also, the many events at the Bridgehampton Library are a regular event.

Back in NYC, friends are always asking what we do during the off-season weekends out east (when no one begs to visit). Thanks to you and your staff, we can regularly avail ourselves of the many cultural activities the area offers. In the city, we are frequently too busy to enjoy such activities; but, out east, we can comfortably partake in them.

Thanks again for helping our family make the most out of our leisure time in a place we love so much. Keep up the good work.

Eileen,Brian Larry Melniker

THE U.S. AND U.K. – THE SAME LINGO?

Dear Dan,

As the name says, Long Island is long. In 1999, I came to appreciate just how much longer it is than I had previously been able to imagine when I was making business trips to Grumman Aircraft at Bethpage and visits to American relatives on the Island, the easternmost of whom lived at Bay Shore.

Until, that is, our elder daughter and son-in-law bought a weekend home in the Hamptons, on Three Mile Harbor.

My wife Jo and I are retired Brits living in a lovely part of England, close to Warwick, Stratford-upon-Avon and the Cotswolds and, to the North West, the great sprawl of Birmingham. Coming from Solihull, the home of Land-Rover Limited, we were delighted to find so many 4 x4 Range-Rovers, "Discos" and chunky Defenders on the roads of the Hamptons.

Our daughter Debs and her husband Jonathan, who is originally from upstate New York, live and work weekdays in Manhattan and bought their East Hampton property in October 1998. In September 1999 Jo and I flew over to lend a hand, in the work on the house, arriving at JFK during the tail-end of Hurricane Floyd. The limo ride to Three Mile Harbor from the airport showed us just how long the Island is.

Another discovery was Dan's Papers, and I was particularly pleased to note that Dan himself sported a full set of whiskers like yours truly. Between chores, seeing the sights and watching the contractors at their labors, Dan's Papers gave Jo and me all the insights and essential data that we needed to get the "feel" of the Hamptons and nearby areas, so your periodical was avidly and minutely read. Jo and I are politically active back home and it took a lot of persuasion on my part, since we were on a break from politicking, to keep Jo from rushing off to offer our assistance at a certain U.S. party's fund-raiser advertised in your pages.

Some very perceptive person once said that the British and the Americans are two nations divided by the same language and I have been encountering and noting examples of this over the years. Its not just the spelling of some words like "Color" for "Colour," or "program" against "programme," but pronunciation, vocabulary and usage.

I ride with the punches when I am in the States and ask for the nearest "ATM" instead of "cash dispenser," the "check" for the "bill" in restaurants and, on business trips, obeyed the lights at "intersections" just as I would at home at "crossroads," even though, like Japanese, Australians, South Africans, Indians, Indonesians and millions of other misguided folk I normally drive on the left. However, Brits have to drive on the right regularly, on trips in Continental Europe, so I suppose (guess?) it's not too much hassle.

Our friend of nearly 40 years, David, a Bostonian, Harvard alumnus and anglophile has no apparent difficulty in understanding me over the 'phone but, for some unaccountable reason, still requires occasional translations when we talk face to face and, less surprisingly, is totally bemused by some of the regional accents and dialects he encounters on our side of the Big Pond. For my part, I've got (gotten?) used to the need to ask for the "restroom" or "bathroom" when the last thing on my mind is to take a rest or have a bath.

Each of our countries is a guardian, in its own inimitable way, of our mutual and energetic language. As a languages graduate, the subject fascinates me, so please forgive me if, due to the serpentine thought process brought on by advancing years, this letter has wandered off on a linguistic tangent from the main theme of saying how much we enjoyed our first stay in your delightful part of the world, in which Dan's Papers played such a major role. Long may your writings give pleasure.

We can't wait to come back.

Sincerely,

Terry & Jo Camplin

MOTOR MOUTH?

Dear Dan,

Bravo on the "Hurricane" piece February 25. NY Times John Tierney makes similar points in his interview with liberal reporter Cal Dean. As to motor mouth Ed Koch, he's becoming a bigger putz every day.
